DEAR APM:

Question: I have what appears to be an original oil painting of Nipper and the Gramophone signed by Barraud. How rare is this?

I.S., Columbus, Ohio

Answer: Many phonograph companies produced trademark representations over the years and yours is apparently one of these. The canvas that you refer to has confused many collectors since it is so realistic. Victor announced in April 1921 that reproductions of the famous trademark design (made on stretched canvas 20" by 26") would be made available to their dealers for $7.50 f.o.b. NYC. At this time, they could only be purchased with frames. By April of 1924, the program had expanded. Nipper could then be bought for $4.00 unframed as well as $7.50 in an "old bronze" frame. The canvas was actually run through a printing press many times to give the effect of a real oil painting. Other simulated oils included 16" by 22" prints of Caruso, Galli-Curci, Gluck and Heifetz. Unframed, these were $3.00 each and framed in antique bronze and brown, they were $4.50 each.

ZON-O-PHONE

Zonophone collectors will be very pleased to learn that a new transfer has been made for both front-mount and rear-mount models. Over the years, no one has attempted to make this difficult item, but Ed Pelo, (one of the Zonophone Pioneers) of Brooklyn, N.Y., has come up with one of the best decals we have ever seen. Once in place on the front panel of the cabinet and shellacked over, it is very difficult to tell the difference between the original and the repro. These are available in extremely limited quantities at $10.00 ea. ppd., only from Charles Mandrake, Publisher of the Zonophone Newsletter, Box 955, Ashtabula, OH 44004. Our thanks to both of these collectors for making this item available!

MY DIAMOND DISC C-150: ON THE TRAIL OF W. D. WILMOT

James Webb

Although I have always been interested in collecting phonographs themselves, a chance find several years ago led me from Melbourne, Florida to Fall River, Massachusetts in an attempt to learn more about the man who originally sold my phonograph when it was new. There it was, just a handsome C-150 Diamond Disc phonograph (the "C" for Chippendale), but one with an additional plate below the Edison "signature" stating that it was sold by W. D. Wilmot of Fall River, Mass. My search for more information on the machine as well as the man led to thousands of miles of travel and dozens of letters. In this case, my work began after I found my machine, but it means much more to me as a result.

It was easier to find information on the model than the dealer. The C-150 was a floor model Diamond Disc machine which was announced on May 21, 1915, and came in mahogany or oak (fumed or weathered) at the original price of $150. It stood 44¼" high, 19½" wide and 20¼" deep. On October 25, 1917, the price was raised to $152.50 to cover the war tax. On January 1, 1918, the price became $160. and finally $175. by August 15, 1918. The machine was discontinued by Edison on March 11, 1919.

I now knew a good deal about my machine, but the identity of W. D. Wilmot was still a mystery to me. Soon I had letters going to the Fall River Historical Society, the Edison National Historic Site, and old local newspapers and photo studios. From these sources I learned that Wilmot's connection with Edison went beyond that of a simple commercial tie and I was able to piece together his life and something about the way phonographs used to be sold.

W. D. Wilmot was born in Rhode Island on July 20, 1855. He loved bicycling as a youngster and would go out even in the coldest weather, soon becoming known around Boston as the "Winter Rider." Around 1882, he turned "pro" and became known as "King of the Wheel." Over the next few years he travelled extensively through America, England and Russia, with partners such as Charles Allen, Lester, Pavillo, and Fred Sewell. He was an expert on unicycles, carriage wheels and bicycles. This phase of his career seems to have ended around 1888.

On July 3, 1884, he had married Bessie B. Hatch in the Boston Bowdoin Square Baptist Church. Twelve years later, he moved his family to Fall River, Massachusetts and lived at 329 Walnut Street. His long interest in bicycles led him to open a new sporting goods and bicycle shop in 1896 at 162 North Main Street. There he became an agent for Columbia and Hartford bicycles and started a school for bicycle riding. He also sold Williams, Franklin, and American typewriters as well as a full line of sundries. By 1899, he moved to the other side of the street, at 101 N. Main, where he was to remain until his retirement in 1932.

Sometime between 1898 and 1899, he became involved with talking machines and records. His chief competition was from C. S. Brown Corp., a large department store in the area. Wilmot soon expanded and sold Columbia, Edison and Victor products, as well as general merchandise. He continued to offer these machines until 1911 when he dropped Columbia in favor of Victor and Edison. He then acquired a two-story building behind his store and dropped the Columbia and Hartford two-wheelers in favor of the Racycle and Yale lines. He also dropped his old typewriters in favor of the new Fox Visible. As if this were not enough to keep him busy, he also ran the largest doll hospital outside of Boston and found time to sell Cole Automobiles!

But when did he begin to sell Edison disc phonographs, you may ask? It was early 1914 that he finally decided to sell only Edison machines, carrying the Amberola cylinder models and the new Diamond Disc types. Within a year, he was written up in the Edison Phonograph Monthly for September 1914 as a model businessman and aggressive advertiser. He even bought Edisons by the trainload! It must have been during this period that he sold the machine I now own.

On September 7, 1920, he had enough clout to write to the Edison Recording Dept. and request that a title be done especially for him — Christians Awake. This was indeed promised to him by Mr. W. Maxwell (who

IN THE PINK: A LAMBERT DISCOGRAPHY

Allen Koenigsberg

I have always been fascinated by the celluloid cylinders manufactured by Thomas B. Lambert of Chicago from 1900 to 1905. When I found my first "Pink Lamberts" in the late 1960's, there was no listing available anywhere to give an idea of repertoire, artists, dates, etc. of this interesting company. Dr. Duane Deakins had contemplated publishing a listing to complement his earlier work on Edison, Indestructible, and U.S. Everlasting, but he was tragically killed in a plane crash in 1962. Luckily, I was able to acquire his research notes in 1969 and have been adding numbers, artists and titles ever since. APM now owns over 45 Lamberts of all types, and has located three original catalogues of Lambert Records from 1903 and 1904. Also, many collectors have written in over the years with additional data, among them Cecil Dancer, Frank Stephens, John Steffen, George Schoen, George Blacker, John Kaar, G. R. Talbott, and John Petty. Recently, a Lambert Sampler by Joe Manzo appeared in Issue No. 32 of The New Amberola Graphic. It was obviously time for APM to gather all the xeroxes, letters, ads, catalogues, and notes, and get out a reasonably complete Lambert Discography.

Lambert cylinders came in many colors, first white (the natural color of celluloid), and then pink, brown and black. The first ones have the company name printed in ink across the grooves, and other early examples have little triangular blocks inside the title end to guide the cylinder onto the tapered mandrel. Since Edison controlled the patent on the tapered-bore, these were soon removed, as Lambert could only successfully claim that his cylinders were not tapered but only grasped the mandrel at one point on either end. The cylinders gradually became lighter in weight and were soon dyed black, sometimes over a previous coat of pink! The very early Lamberts had a good deal of surface noise and there is some evidence that the dyes were used to ease that problem.

Lambert's basic patent of March 20, 1900 is generally marked on the rim, and later the patent of July 29, 1902 replaced it. (Another patent, originating in France, was dated October 30, 1894, and appeared on cylinders Lambert made for other companies, such as I.P.L.S., Keating, etc.). By 1903 Lambert had developed his graphite and copper plating technique to the point that he was able to introduce an unbreakable Concert (5-inch diameter) cylinder, also with no core. (These titles, approximately 125 of them, will appear in the next issue). Some of the early standard cylinders also bear the mysterious initials 'S.S.' and 'H.S.' on the rim. The regular 2" diameter cylinders continued to be made until late 1904, or perhaps into early 1905. The highest number 2" was 1053 and the highest 5" was 5125. The total number of Lamberts issued was probably around 1200.

The problem of identifying Lambert titles is compounded by several difficulties. Lambert apparently licensed Great Britain's Edison-Bell Co. to manufacture their own pink cylinders, (or perhaps to share their masters) and these are frequently numbered within the same blocks (however, the announcements will usually state "Edison-Bell"; that is why all Lamberts must actually be played). These often will have a pencilled 'E' inside the cylinder. Also, some numbers were apparently re-assigned and used more than once. (Some seem to have a small letter "a" next to the number). Other cylinders have more than one pencilled number inside, opposite the title end. Sometimes the letters "Tr" also appear inside. This latter mark, as well as the crossed out numbers, seems to indicate that the entire cylinder was re-pressed and a new selection literally steamed over the first. The last cylinders made, which used a plaster core for the first time, had no pencilled notations.

The numerical 2" series began at #101 and continued through 1053. What is most surprising in the early numbers is the large quantity of Yiddish cylinders (some marked with the letter "H"), and I know of nothing to account for this, other than the physical nearness of the recording talent in Chicago. A random sampling of some three dozen records (thanks to Cort Ancman and Eileen Hirsch) matched the catalog listings perfectly, suggesting that perhaps the present gaps are real.

If the response is adequate, we plan to issue a separate Catalog of Lambert Cylinders (2" and 5"), along with ads, patents, and details about Lambert's life and work. Although we feel that most of the numbers and titles have probably been identified, any reader who is able to fill in the spaces (noting the color as well) or make corrections will be entitled to a special courtesy discount on the final discography. For the sharp-eyed, there is also etched information on the cylinders right after the record grooves.

More About Our Books!

APM Trade Catalogs & Posters

If you want to identify your machines quickly and accurately, then these attractively printed catalogs (many in color) are just for you! All are profusely illustrated and most contain anywhere from 20 to 80 glossy pages. Their main advantage, besides making perfect companions for your matching phonographs, is that they show exactly how the talking machines were displayed, with correct horns, reproducers, cranks, cabinets, etc., even with original prices!

For example, the 1901 Iver Johnson Catalog ($4.50) has 80 pages of pictures and descriptions of all kinds of phonograph accessories, like reproducers, record cabinets, listening rails, oil cans, horns and cranks, elbows, diaphragms, springs, carrying cases, etc. for disc and cylinder models.

Another beauty is the 1899 Talking Machine Co. of Chicago Catalog (3.25) with 64 pages of cylinder records and pictures of many Edison and Columbia phonographs, some with the latest Polyphone Attachment, an early form of "stereo."

One of the most handsome publications was the 1902 Bettini Phonograph Supplies Catalog (4.95) with its stunning silver, black, red, and brown covers. Illustrated throughout in detail on 40 pages is the full range of Bettini apparatus shown on various Edison and Columbia machines.

The 1910-1917 Victor Repair Manual (5.25) has 64 pages of parts layouts for most outside horn Victors and some inside horn models. Literally every gear and hinge is fully illustrated, with special sections on mainspring replacement and reproducer repair.

As the phonograph began to sweep America, Edison's National Phonograph Company decided to issue a basic guide book to their many machines. This legendary book, The Phonograph and How to Use It (13.95), was first published in 1900 and has been reproduced in every detail, including the three-color embossed hard-covers and linen-sewn binding. Its 182 pages contain everything, from the history of the phonograph in the tinfoil days, to the latest in Edison coin-operated models. Detailed line drawings show all the basic styles, with many break-away views of motors, upper mechanisms, reproducers, etc. This is an essential book for the Edison collector.

Antique Phonograph Publications

One of our newest books is Collecting Phonographs and Gramophones (14.95) by Christopher Proudfoot. This beautiful hard-cover volume has nearly 100 photographs, most in color, of every type of cylinder and disc talking machines. Written by Christie's Gramophone Expert, it contains many helpful suggestions for beginning a collection, what to look for, what can and cannot be fixed, specific spring and cabinet repairs, etc., as well as a list of further places to write to for information. Every machine is also given a current appraisal value.

Another beautiful new book is the 274-page Phonographs and Gramophones (24.95) by Herbert Juttmann. Hundreds of black-and-white photos show machines, mostly European, rarely seen in the average collection. While the German text may be a drawback for some, the pictures, as we like to say, "are in English!" The book is also fully indexed, with nice line drawings to illustrate the various principles.

The long-awaited book by Ron Dethlefsen is finally available! Entitled Edison Blue Amberol Recordings, 1912-1914 (22.95), it is the first volume of a 2-volume set. It is basically organized around the fascinating record slips found inside many of the Blue Amberols and contains over 300 of them. Pictures are included of the artists and machines, as well as dozens of biographies. The Blue Amberols are cross-indexed to Edison Diamond Discs and the earlier wax Amberol cylinders, and are arranged alphabetically by title. Much is included on the history of Edison records, manufacturing processes, molds, number of records sold, "live" and dubbed issues, etc. Printed in a signed and numbered edition of 500.

Now out of print everywhere else, The EMI Collection (12.95) by Ernie Bayly, is available only from APM under special arrangement. This limited edition, with its handsome green and gold covers and nearly 300 large glossy photographs, will surely become an historic item since the entire collection on which the book is based was recently sold at Auction. Each machine is fully described and dated, and there is an excellent section on Cameraphones and needle tins. We suggest you get this one, as it represents an excellent value for your money.

One of the most marvelous projects in the history of the phonograph hobby has been the re-release of the original series of Edison dealers' magazines entitled The Edison Phonograph Monthly. These were sent by Edison to his registered dealers every month, and each volume, bound in hard red and gold covers, contains 12 issues full of new record releases, equipment announcements, design changes, ads, company advice, line drawings, tips on salesmanship, etc. The years 1903 to 1909 have been published in seven volumes, ranging from 180 to 312 pages. Vol's 1, 2, 3, 4, 5 are 12.95 each, and Vol's 6 and 7 are 13.95 ea. Readers will be informed as more appear.

If you are interested in the earliest days of the phonograph, when Edison introduced his first commercial models, then you will be fascinated by The 1890 Edison Phonograph Convention (7.95). This 261-page book contains much inside information on the development of the first Class M Electric versions, the Water Power and Treadle types, and the appearance of the first coin-operated phonographs. The entire convention (the first ever held) was recorded on wax and the various gossip and reports (and arguments) give the meeting a real sparkle.

One of the finest celebrations in honor of the 100th anniversary of the invention of the phonograph was held in Edinburgh, Scotland in 1977. In conjunction with their beautiful Exhibit, ten phonograph historians were invited to speak at the Official Opening. The papers have been published under the imposing title of The Royal Scottish Phonograph Symposium (13.95). The authors include Ray Wile, George Frow, Peter Adamson and others, on topics as diverse as gramophone furniture design, Berliner records, the invention of the tinfoil phonograph, the electrical reproduction of cylinders, etc. Many of the articles are handsomely illustrated. This book was printed in a limited edition solely for the Centenary and will not be re-issued when sold out.

BOOK REVIEW

Collecting Phonographs and Gramophones

Garry Wetstein

I remember the difficulty that I encountered when I tried to find any information on antique phonographs as a beginning collector six years ago. Ever since then, I have been looking for a book such as Collecting Phonographs and Gramophones, but although I have accumulated most of the basic sources (such as From Tin Foil to Stereo, The Phonograph and How to Use It, ECR, 1889-1912, etc.), none have filled the need for a general handbook to the entire hobby. This book may not be the "answer to my dreams," but it is an excellent step in the right direction.

It must be kept in mind that this book, despite the many photos of rare machines, is primarily intended for the novice collector. Clarity and scope are more important here than the really detailed information that some advanced collectors prefer. As such, this book will surely find its way onto the shelves of general bookstores and bring the hobby to a much wider audience. When I began, I was lucky to learn of APM and other hobby publications which made the introduction into our hobby much more painless. I hope that this new book will serve a similar purpose.

There are over 120 pages in this attractive hard-cover book, with about 95 illustrations, many in full color. Authored by the Gramophone Expert at Christie's auction house, Christopher Proudfoot, it is divided into three major sections: "A Guide to Makes and Models," "Building and Maintaining a Collection," and a series of excellent appendices. This set-up is both logical and necessary, considering the purpose of the book.

The main drawback that some may sense is that the book, originating in England, has a strong emphasis on British makes and variations. It is true that our hobby now circles the globe and there is increasing interest in "foreign" machines, but American collectors will no doubt wish that more domestic machines could have been covered. For some makes, like Edison, many of the machines will be similar. But for Victor (HMV in Great Britain), there are a number of differences and no American Victors are illustrated. The problem once again is that Mr. Proudfoot relied on Christie's for his illustrations, and since the auctions took place overseas, most of the pictures have a European flavor.

The book is beautifully illustrated with the finest color photography of many machines and accessories, but again the emphasis throughout is on unusual phonographs, such as repeating models, cylinder tone-arms, the Monarch Senior, a hand-driven Berliner, and even an honest-to-goodness Flamephone. Why, if the book was designed for starting collectors, are so many unusual phonographs pictured? Why not simply show the basic types, company by company, and leave the esoteric models for the back of the book? Again, the reason must have been that many more unusual machines were in the auctions than common ones.

The historical data accompanying the pictures is quite accurate and written from a collector's point of view, such as a discussion of horn types on Berliner gramophones. The chapters on building a collection and repair and restoration are quite excellent, with good diagrams, and contain information never before found in any books on the hobby. Many reproducers are illustrated, as well as needle tins, children's phonographs, internal horn machines, and a number of models to make the most advanced collector's mouth water, such as the Lioret No. 2 with celluloid cylinders, the Stollwerck with chocolate discs, a Bettini Standard, and a pleated Lumiere floor model.

Every machine in the book is given a price evaluation and there is also a novel feature that makes good sense to an auction house. The rear jacket contains a pre-printed form which the reader may send in to Christie's for a free "appraisal" of any phonographs in his collection. Obviously, the company hopes to garner some items for one of its future sales! The book also contains a glossary of terms, and a bibliography that mentions books, museums, collections and hobby magazines.

All in all, this is an excellent book and well worth owning. It is no substitute for the eventual book or books which will cover the field more fully, but every serious collector will want to have it in his library. It is available for $14.95 from your local bookstore or directly from APM. The more collectors who treat books as importantly as machines, the more books will be published to fill that need. □ incidentally is the voice that introduces Edison on "Let Us Not Forget"), but I have been unable to locate it.

On March 5, 1921 Wilmot gave a well-publicized inspirational talk to the Fall River Boys Club, extolling the life and work of Thomas Edison. There is a good deal of correspondence on this subject in the Edison files and Wilmot even received the personal thanks of Edison himself for the lecture.

The impact of radio must have had an effect on his sales, however, and he was forced to quit selling phonographs by the end of 1923.

Wilmot retired in 1932 and lived on until the age of 83. He died at his home on New Boston Road, Sept. 19, 1938, leaving behind his wife and a daughter. Many old time merchants of Fall River still have fond memories of W.D., saying again and again that he was a "real gentleman". He seems to have had many of the same characteristics as Edison, wanderlust in his early days and a certain perseverance and attention to detail in his later years. I feel that I do not simply own an Edison Diamond Disc machine, but that I share with it the memory of an unusual and resourceful man who made phonographs a large part of his life.

My sincere thanks to Florence Brigham of the Fall River Historical Society, Lynn Wightman of the Edison National Historic Site, and the Mullen Photo Studios of Fall River, Mass. If anyone has any memorabilia, record brushes, etc., pertaining to W. D. Wilmot, I would be most pleased to hear from them through APM. □
